The steamer Washington arrived at New York on the 11th inst from Nicaragua. She reached San Juan on the 18th November, and found in port the American frigate Sayannah and sloop-of-war Jamestown; also the British ships Leopard and Valorous. Sir William Gore Ousley was on board the latter.

The Nicaraguan government refused permission to land the passengers of the Washington, alieging that they were fillibusters. The steamer Catharine Maria was, however, sent to Granada to obtain permission to land the passengers, if the Hermann had arrived.

The Washington was boarded by the officers of the British, who asked to see the passenger list, and also for information as to whether she had munitions of war on board; but they did not insist on raising the hatches, and then left suddenly. Boats from the Leopard then went to the mouth of the Colorado to intercept 250 men who were reported to have landed there from the Washington on the previous night.

Colonel Childs, the company's agent, returned from Granada without accomplishing any arrangement. On the contrary, the boat was not allowed to pass Fort San Carlos without an officer and a file of soldiers on board.

The government, however, became finally satisfied that there were no fillibusters either on the Washington or Hermann, and the steamer was permitted to land at Virgin Bay. The agent of the company then proceeded to San Juan del Sur to look after the Hermann. gin Bay. The agent of the company then proceeded to San Juan del Sur to look after the Hermann.

No orders having come for the passengers of the Washington to go forward by the mail route, they remained on board and returned to New York.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE IN PENNSYLVA-

(From the Philadelphia Peansylvaniau, Dec. 11.)

On the reception of President Buckanan's message at Middleburg, Snyder county, the democrats held a meeting in order to testify in a proper manner their gratification at the tone, temper, and contents of this admirable and patriotic State paper. The assembly was very large, and the utmost enthusiasm provailed. Not a democrat dissented from the positions laid down by Mr. Buchanan, while large numbers of the opposition expressed their satisfaction with the plain, dignified, and statesmanlike manner in which the President discusses the various topics of national interest introduced in his message. The foreign policy of the President especially meets the commendation of the people of Snyder county, who recognise in the doctrines promulgated by Mr. Buchanan the best safeguards to the continued peace and prosperity of the nation. This expression of public sentiment in Snyder county may safely be taken as an index to that of the State. The opposition may rail at the message, but the masses will ratify it in all sections of the Commonwealth.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMNIA .- Secretary Thompson dwells certain if any determinate line of policy had been adopted in relation to objects of appropriation in the city of Washington. He discovered that Congress had from time to time made appropriations for almost every conceivable object, so that it was impossible for him to determine what class of improvements the government is bound to make, and what the city. He is satisfied, if this uncertainty could be removed, and a clear understanding had as to the relative duties of the government and city in the expenditure of money for improvements, that the prosperity of the city would be greatly promoted. Although the subject is environed with difficulties, he is of the opinion that Congress, if so disposed, can adopt such a line of the recomment, courtesy, and even conductive to be meeting the manion House, rarely to be met with among persons temporarily thrown together—before can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily recommend the Manadon House that, perhaps, almost entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily throw to entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily throw to entire strangers to each other. We can, therefore, heartily throw to enti the sobject is environed with difficulties, he is of the opinion that Congress, if so disposed, can adopt such a line of policy as will subserve all practical purposes. No one can doubt that, if the relation which the government and the city respectively sustain to the various improvements that are to be made was defined, the city would reap the fruits of it in a regular system of improvements carried on by both parties to adorn and beautify, and supply the usual and necessary conveniences of a city. The Secretary does not hesitate to declare that the squares and open spaces belonging to the United States ought to be enclosed and handsomely improved by the government as soon as the condition of the treasury will admit of the expenditure. This is a just and honest admit of the expenditure. This is a just and honest a light of the consisting of the lovers of chees was held last evening in the rooms over the drug store of Ford & Bro., and a club regularly organized. The election of officers resulted in the choice of the following gentlemen: President, S. Calvert Ford, sr.; vice president, Rufus R. Rhodes; secretary, Baldwin presented a copy of the regulations of the New York chees club, which were read before the meeting. A committee, consisting of Dr. Brooke Jones, Nicholas Hatter, and S. H. Platt, were appointed to prepare a code of laws for the proper government of the club. The rooms selected for permanent occupation are the same in which these gentlemen have hitherto met The next meeting of the club will be held on Saturday next, at 7, p. m., when the rooms will be fitted up with furniture carried on by both parties to adorn and beautify, and supply the usual and necessary conveniences of a city. The Secretary does not hesitate to declare that the squares and open spaces belonging to the United States ought to be enclosed and handsomely improved by the government as soon as the condition of the treasury will admit of the expenditure. This is a just and honest view of the subject, and it is difficult to perceive how view of the subject, and it is difficult to perceive how any fair-dealing person can entertain any other view. Secretary Thompson is of the opinion that opening, gra-ding, paving, and lighting streets and avenues, construct-ing sewers and drains, the erection of markets, support of a police, and whatever is necessary for cleanliness and health, are objects which should properly claim the at-tention of the city authorities, and that the expenditures incorrect on account of them should be ruled by taxation incurred on account of them should be raised by taxation in the usual way. He, however, following the instincts of a controlling sense of justice, makes the following suggestion: "Whether the government, as a property-holder, should contribute to these ends in proportion to its interest in the city, is a ques-tion which addresses itself exclusively to the discretion of the national legislature." Considering the large interest which the government has in the property of the city, being nearly equal in value to all the taxable property, it is no more than just that the government should bear a due proportion of the expense for the objects designated by the Secretary. Whether it would be better for the government to submit to taxa-tion, or to make appropriations from time to time for such improvements as it may prefer, is for Congress to

The extension of the court-house and the erection The extension of the court-noise and the erection of a new jail are subjects which, in the estimation of the Secretary, commend themselves to the consideration of Congress. Although it is usual, he says, for such buildings to be erected by the people for whose convenience they are designed, yet, as there are no means under the they are designed, yet, as there are no means under the existing state of things for raising the necessary funds, the Secretary is of opinion that the expense ought to be borne by the general government, or a law passed authorizing a tax to be levied for the purpose upon the whole District. It is presumed that Washington would not object to the tax, but the same submission could not justly be expected of Georgetown and the county, They would most likely regard it as a tax for the benefit of the city, and would resist the passage through Congress of any such law by all fair and honorthrough Congress of any such law by all lair and honor-able means. The only method of securing the necessary accommodations for the courts and a new prison, which are so much needed, is for Congress to make an appro-priation for the purpose. The court-house and the jail belong to the government. The courts are United States courts, and the prison a United States prison; and why the government should not: stain the expense of extending the court-house and erecting a new jail cannot well be perceived.

The Secretary's views in relation to the city will doubtess prove very acceptable to our citizens, and will be regarded by the country at large as just and proper. They are evidently the result of mature reflection and of a de-sire to arrive at an impartial and just conclusion. If Congress will entertain them in the candid spirit in which they are presented and discussed, and act upon them with a determination to do what is right and fair, there can be no doubt but that ample justice will be done the city

Mansion House.—To persons intending to spend the winter in Washington, and anxious to secure quarters where they may have all the elegancies, comforts, and conveniences of a first-class hotel, without any of the annoyances, bustle, and disquietnde, we know of no place we can more heartily recommend than the "Massion House." This is the establishment formerly known as the "Elebit House," but so thoroughly has it been refitted, reneyated, and repaired that it is fully entitled to a new name, as well as deserving of increased patronage. Mss. M. A. Knight, its present accomplished proprietross and haly-like hostess, has spared neither pains nor expense to make it the most elegant and desimble resort for members of Congress and others sojourning here, with or without their families, in the city of Washington. We confess that she has succeeded admirably, and that if it were not for the general air of order, quieconfess that she has succeeded admirably, and that if it were not for the general air of order, quietude, and comfort pervading her establishment, it might, indeed, be styled a first-class hotel, instead of the more quiet, but not less elegant, (and morn select,) boarding-house. Every room in Mrg. E.'s house is fitted up with a view to comfort as well as style, and one is at a less to know who of those employed in fitting it up has surpassed the others in his particular department. The furniture from Maguire's, and the up.

holatery from Smallwood's, are both elegant in their way. Especially in the general parlor, and in the suiter on the second floor, have they surpassed themselves. Finer rooms are not to be found anywhere, nor, we dare say, cheaper, for such as are able to engage them. We are glad to observe, too, that Mrs. K.'s energy and enterprise The District of Columbia.—Secretary Thompson dwells with more than ordinary interest in his report upon District matters. He shows the relation which the government sustains towards the District of Columbia under the constitution, and the various measures that have been adopted to secure for it a proper system of laws. He has looked in vain into the past legislation of Congress to ascertain if any determinate line of policy had been adopted. THE FOLLOWING PLAN adopted at a meeting.

In his November 10, 1837, is repu lished with the names of the treasurer, collectors, and distributors appointed in purasance of the provisions. The plan proposes.

1. That each of the seven wards of the city he divided into four districts, and that for each of these districts at teach one gentleman be appointed to collect means for the relief of the poor, and one lady to order their distribution. The agency of these persons to be combined to their own particular districts.

2. That the funds contributed to this object be all paid by the collector into the hands of a person appointed to acl as treasurer of the Ladies' Bracevoient Society, upon whom shall devolve the duty of examining and paying all bills against the Society, and who shall be allowed a reasonable compensation for his sorvices.

3. That the collectors take from the treasurer receipts for all the meaning and paying all bills against the Society, and who shall be allowed a reasonable compensation for his sorvices.

3. That the collectors take from the treasurer receipts for all the meaning committee who may be appointed by this Society to examine the treasurer's account.

4. That the distributors in each ward be directed to draw their orders, so far as possible, upon the same person or persons, that the number of accounts being limited the dulies of the treasurer may be the more easily performed.

5. That applications for assistance be made only to the distributor within whose district the applicant resides; and that distributors be directed to vieit applicants, as far as possible, at their homes, that they may learn with certainty the nature and extent of their wants.

5. That it shall be an especial doty of the "collectors and distributors in each distribut to aid in obtaining employment for the deutitude who are in need of it.

7. That all persons having claims against the society present them to the treasurer for payment on the first day of each month, sending with their bulk the orders they have receiv to relieve the Poor of Washington.

distributors cause of announce and extension, and residences of the collectors and distributors, be published in the Intelligencer, Union, Star, and States, of this city, and that as many copies of it be printed for general circulation as the president and treasurer of the society may deem expedient.
